Oct. 2

From the Albany Daily Advertiser.

The Maryland democrats having at length been overcome by the federalists, and lost the command of the State, are outrageously angry. In the first ebullitions of their disappointment, and vexation, they set up a loud cry of bribery and corruption against their opponents. If they really believed that they had lost the prize by federal bribery, we are not at all surprised that they were mortified as well as provoked. They had so long been accustomed to consider bribery and corruption, as their exclusive privileges—and so entirely useful and necessary to their success and prosperity—that they might well be disturbed in their tempers upon finding themselves foiled with their own weapons. We might naturally enough expect to hear them exclaim with the young Hebrew, when he was plundered of his ephod & his teraphim—"ye have taken away our gods and what have we more." After having used this charge for several days, the profound authors of it discovered that it had an edge to it that they did not at first discover—if federalists gained the election by bribery, it must necessarily follow that democrats had been bribed. This seemed to be an implied impeachment of their own integrity and virtue, and was not a very strong argument to be applied to the good sence and patriotism of the men who were thus coarsely accused of having been bought. Upon making this discovery and being fearful that those people, who have so long been accustomed to their flattery, and adulation, might "put up their backs" at so foul a charge from them, the papers, particularly the Baltimore Patriot, "rises to explain," and avers that "he has shewn, that the republican papers have not said that any democrat was bribed; that only a few men, who had occasionally pretended to be democrats, and occasionally federalists, and by receiving large federal bribes, voted so as to turn the scale in favour of federalism, and to give that party the ascendancy in the electoral college; and that it did not require the bribery of thousands, nor of one democrat, to effect the triumph of federal party." It seems, then, that as the people who are claimed to have been bribed, were not democrats, they must, of course, have been federalists—for there are, usually, but two sorts of politicians in our country—federalists & democrats. Here then was a new case—federalists bribing their own party. If this be the fact, we do not see what great ground of complaint there is among the democrats, so long as the federalists did not attempt their virtue, but confined their bribes to their own men.

This also proves another fact—and that is, that the democrats are the minority in Maryland, notwithstanding their pretensions to the contrary. For if the election was carried by federal bribery, and that bribery was confined to federalists, it must follow as a necessary consequence, that the election was carried in favour of the federalists only by bringing out all their strength, which gave them the majority. And such we understand to be the plain confession of the Patriot, in the passage above quoted. He says—"that it did not require the bribery of thousands of democrats, nor of one democrat, to effect the triumph of the federal party." That is, the federal party were able, if their whole force was in the field, to carry the election, without purchasing a single democratic vote.—The language used must mean this, even if it be true, that the election was carried by bribery—for it seems it could be carried without the bribery of one democrat, which irresistably implies that there were federalists enough for the purpose, if they could only be brought out.

The fact, however, being conceded, as it here plainly is, that the federalists were not under the necessity of bribing, and that they actually did not bribe, democrats, we think it will require some stronger proof than the base assertions of disappointed and angry democrats, to establish the fact, that the Maryland federalists actually bribed their own party to vote for their own tickets.

Having lost the election, and in consequence thereof, having secured a federal senate for the coming five years, the poor democrats are almost frantic, and are now all agog for a reform in their own constitution. The moment a constitution ceases to answer the purposes of that party, that moment it is in their opinion, worthless and must be so modified as that it will accomplish their own object. Thus it was in the case of the constitution of the United States—as soon as the government fell into the hands of Mr. Jefferson, he procured it to be altered so as to secure not only his own re-election but the future success of his party, and especially of his State. We should like to know whether any democratic papers in Maryland, whilst the party maintained the ascendancy in the State, was ever known to lisp a syllable against the constitution, or the inequality of representation. Now, when the power of the state has departed from them and the sceptre has changed hands, that same constitution is reprobated in very strong language. Nay, a proposition is already out in one of their leading papers, for a convention to mould it over in such a manner as that it may be made to answer their purpose better than it is now likely to do. The plan proposed is for a "radical reform." This anti-republican five years Senate, under whose influence the democrats have rested for the last five years with exemplary meekness and submission, is now to be done away, and the proposal to elect them by the people, for two or three years only. Other changes of similar importance are proposed—and all of it grows out of the fact, that the federalists have gained the command of the state.

This scheme of restoring democratic supremacy by breaking up the constitution looks very much as if that party despaired of ever gaining the upper hand hereafter. They may boast, and grumble as much as they please—but, if they were convinced that even after the expiration of the five years, they should be able to triumph over the federalists and recover the government, they would "grin and bear it" through; for, in their hands, a five years lease is vastly more desirable, than one or two, or even three years. One thing, however, the federalists of Maryland, and of all other places, may rest satisfied, and that is, that neither Constitutions, nor any other instruments that do not secure to that party all the office, and emolument of the country, at large or of the states, will be suffered to stand in the way of ambition. They will prostrate them all, rather than part with power.

From the Albany Daily Advertiser.

The following story, with the emphatic introduction prefixed to it, is publishing in the newspapers, as a striking instance of "juvenile perversity." It is probably recollected by those who appear to wonder at the early depravity evinced by this youth, that his father was a Godwinite—one of the modern cosmopolites, and perfectability men, who grew up so plentifully in Europe, and among other parts of Europe, in England, some twenty or thirty years ago. Holcroft, the father, was one of those men, who wished to dispense with all government, not only in the body politic, but in the family, and amused himself with the idea that human reason was a sufficient guide to mankind in the performance of their duties here, and for all important purposes hereafter—if, indeed, there should be any hereafter.

Among other things, Holcroft engaged deeply in the great business of REFORM, which was so much in vogue in Europe after the tornado of Revolution broke out, and swept over France, and the neighbouring countries. In conjunction with Hardy, Thelwall, Tooke, and others, the Reformers actually commenced their labours, and nobody can tell what might have happened, if their career had been unfortunately arrested by the strong arm of Civil Power. They were arraigned before the courts, and though they escaped punishment, the fright put an end to their cosmopolitical labours; and Holcroft took to writing plays, and novels, and if we mistake not, his own memoirs. As a specimen of his good sense, as well as acuteness of intellect, it may be mentioned, that when he was about to be tried (for treason, if we are not mistaken) he prepared his own defence, which he was with difficulty persuaded by his lawyer not to use, but which he afterwards published, in which he rested his safety altogether upon his principles-making the basis, and strength of his argument to consist in this—That his conduct being founded exclusively upon the principles of "political justice," which taught him to do good, and not hurt, to mankind, it was impossible, under such an influence, that he could have been guilty of so black a crime as that of which he was accused. The lawyer very wisely concluding that abstract reasoning would go but a little way against evidence, induced him, as we have remarked, not to trust to such defence.

His son had, undoubtedly, been instructed in the refined and mystical nonsense of "Political Justice." Probably, in addition to the lessons which he received from his father, he had also many opportunities to listen to the profound discussions of the school, on the merit of their system, and the progress it was making in the world. Godwin, the author of "Political Justice," inculcated such doctrines as these—"that all religion was superstition—that marriage was a farce—that all domestic relations, and duties, were the mere offspring of prejudice, and slavery of the mind—that parents were not bound to provide for their children, except upon the broad principle of justice, founded upon merit, according to which, they and the children of strangers stood upon a footing—that of course children owed neither affection, gratitude, nor reverence to parents—that intercourse between the sexes should be promiscuous, and all the ties of relationship be broken up and lost. These are a few of the doctrines of the school to which Holcroft belonged, and which, no doubt, this young reprobate, his son, was taught.

Is it a matter of astonishment that the pupil of such a master, should rob his father, fall into dissipation and profligacy, and in the end, commit suicide? So far from it, all these, and all the other vices that blacken the human character, are the natural and almost necessary consequences of the desteble system in which he had been educated. One of the maxims of these philosophists was, that "death is an eternal sleep." Religion being then superstition, and future accountability entirely out of the question, probably this young adept in the mysteries of modern philosophy, thought it better to commence his everlasting sleep a little ealier than to lose his independence, and become subjected to the odious tyranny of a parental government.

The French revolution commenced its bloody and terrible career under the auspices of cosmopolites, and the natural effects of their principles in their enlarged sphere of operations, were to be traced in tremendous characters of misery and blood, over the face of every region where they spread. In that school of "illustrious Jefferson" imbibed some of his notions, which have been the source of almost all the political misfortunes which this country has endured; the effects of which will not be eradicated from our national affairs in half a century to come. On the large scale, where it overturns kingdoms and empires, and butchers mankind by thousands, and millions, men of visionary minds, and inflamed imaginations, as well as those of more vicious and desperate principles find much in this philosophical perfectability to admire and applaud. In the domestic circle, where the example is confined to a single object, and that object a child, the mind naturally concludes that when he rebels against parental authority, and destroys his own life rather than submit, he ought to be set down as a monument of "singular perversity."

PARENTAL INDULGENCE AND JUVENILE PERVERSITY.

The following dreadful instance of the pernicious effects of excessive parental indulgence is related in Holcroft's memoirs:

"His eldest son, William, was a boy of extraordinary capacity, and Mr. Holcroft thought no pains should be spared for his instruction and improvement. From the first, however, he had shown an unsettled disposition, and his propensity to ramble was such from his childhood, that when he was only four years old, and under the care of an aunt at Nottingham, he wandered away to a place at some distance, where there was a coffee house, into which he went, and read the newspapers to the company, by whom he was taken care of, and sent home. This propensity was so strong in him that it became habitual, and he had run away six or seven times before the last. Once for instance, in 1786, when he was about thirteen, he had taken a little mare belonging to his father, and went to Northampton, where he was discovered by some respectable persons in the place, and word being sent to Mr. Holcroft, he went down and brought him home with him. On Saturday, November 8th, 1789, he brought his father a short poem; his father conversed with him in the most affectionate manner, praised encouraged, and told him that, notwithstanding his former errors and wanderings, he was convinced he would become a good and an excellent man. But he observed when taking him by the hand to express his kindness, that the hand of the youth, instead of returning the presure as usual remained cold and insensible.—This, however at the moment was supposed to be accidental. He seemed unembarressed, cheerful, and asked leave, without any appearance of design or hesitation, to dine with with a friend in the city, which was immediately granted. He thanked his father, went down stairs, and several times anxiously enquired whether his father was gone to dress. As soon as he was told that he had left his room he went up stairs again, broke open a drawer and took out forty pounds. With this, the watch, a pocket book, and a pair of pistols of his father's, he hastened away to join one of his acquaintance, who was going to the W. Indies. The name of this young person was G. He was immediately pursued to Gravesend, but ineffectually.

It was not discovered till the following Wednesday, that he had taken the money. After several days of the most distressing inquietude, there appeared strong presumptive proofs that he, with his acquaintance was on board the Fame, captain Carr, then lying in the Downs. The father and a friend immediately set off and travelled post all night to Deal. Their information proved true, for he was found on board the Fame, where he assumed a false name, though his true situation was known to the captain. He had spent all the money except 7, paying for his passage, and purchasing what he thought he wanted. He had declared he would shoot any person who came to take him, but that if his father came he would shoo himself. His youth, for he was about sixteen, made the threat appear incredible. The pistol, pocket book, and remaining money, was locked up for him by his acquaintance. But he had another pair of pistols concealed. Mr. Holcroft and his friend went on board, made enquiries and understood he was there. He had retired into a dark part of the steerage. When he was called he did not answer, a light was sought for, and as he heard the ship's steward, some of the sailors, and his father approaching, conscious of what he had done, and unable to bear the presence of his father and the open shame of detection, he suddenly put an end to his existence."

The Museum will be open for the reception of Visitors, on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday afternoons from 3 to 6 o'clock.

ALEXANDRIA:

THURSDAY, October 3.

From the Federal Gazette.

Wm Duane, the Editor of the Aurora, gives a horrid and, I am sure, a very true picture of democracy. It has reduced Pennsylvania to the lowest state of degradation.

The ruling party in the state legislature are so ignorant, that they cannot draft a law, or transact any public business without the assistance of the federal members from Philadelphia.

The following publication taken from the Aurora of the 11th inst. will give some idea of the present situation of the politics of Pennsylvania:

PENNSYLVANIA POLITICS.

Bets are already offered and accepted, as to the issue of the governor's election, which is to take place a year hence: five to three for Findley against Boileau. All this is fully in the gambling style, in which the sober people of Pennsylvania permit their affairs to be conducted: nobody now makes any calculation about the honor, honesty, capacity, services, or education of the candidates, every thing is to depend upon the corruptibility of the members to be sent to the assembly at the next session: if Findley and his agents can secure a greater number of votes in caucus than his opponent, Boileau and his agents, those who bet upon him will be sure of winning, for as to the people themselves voting or having any thing efficient to do in the matter, nobody dreams of that—twould be so troublesome to the people to think of it, that the gamblers set down their indifference as a matter certain.

To be sure, this is not a very favorable view of a republic, this is not a strong proof of the wisdom of the people of Pennsylvania, nor likely to convert those who have doubted about the purity of free government—but what is all that to the gamblers, high and low; whoever becomes governor will be sure of fifty thousand dollar salary, and half that sum of presents from office-holders; and whoever can get into the assembly & will sell their consciences, will be sure of offices for nine years at least. This would scarcely be believed out of Pennsylvania, but all in Pennsylvania know this to be the order of the day—free and fair elections are a rare in this state as in the rotten boroughs of England—the whole business of voting is a satire upon freedom, for it is merely recording the event which previous management had rendered inevitable.

A phenomenon, accompanied with terrific circumstances, took place near Casignano, Piedmont. A spout of earth appeared at a short distance from this town, in shape like an inverted cone. Its base was elevated to an immense height: dreadful noises proceeded from its side. Suddenly an impetuous wind dispersed the column; black and dense vapours issued from it, and beat down some walls and chimneys. The inhabitants fled from it in every direction, to escape this terrifying phenomenon. Several persons were hurt by the rubbish. The object of terror at last passed off and the weather resumed its former serenity.

While General Jackson was prosecuting the Creek war, there was a mutiny in his army, occasioned by the want of bread. One company actually resolved on quitting the general, and returning to their homes. The general was apprised of their intention the evening before they intended to march off, when he sent for the officers, and invited them to breakfast with him the next morning. They accordingly came to his quarters, and found him under a large oak tree, eating acorns. Sit down, gentlemen, said he—this is my breakfast, and all that I have to give you. The officers were so well pleased with the visit, that they returned and persuaded the soldiers to continue during the campaign.

Value of Reputation.

The following eloquent effusion on the value of reputation is extracted from the speech of Charles Phillips, Esq. at the court house of Galway, Ireland, on the first of April last, in a case of libel on the Rev. C. O. Mullen, a catholic clergyman.

"What damages, then, can you give? I am content to leave the defendant's crimes altogether out of the question, but how can you recompense the sufferings of my client? Who shall estimate the cost of priceless reputation—that impress which gives this human dross its currency, without which we stand despised, debased, depreciated? Who shall repair it when injured? Who can redeem it when lost? Oh! well and truly does the great philosopher of poetry esteem the world's wealth as "trash" in the comparison: without it gold has no value: birth, no distinction: station, no dignity: beauty, no charm: age, no reverence. Or, should I not rather say without it, every treasure impoverishes, every grace deforms, every dignity degrades, and all the arts, and decorations and accomplishments of life, stand like the beacon blaze upon a rock, warning the world that its approach is danger, that its contact is death. The wretch without it is under an eternal quarantine, no friend to greet, no home to harbor him; the voyage of his life becomes a joyless peril, and in the midst of all ambition can achieve, or avarice amass, or rapacity plunder, he tosses on the surge, a buoyant pestilence! But let me not degrade into the selfishness of individual safety or individual exposure, this universal principle: it testifies a higher, a more ennobling origin: it is this, which consecrating the humble circle of the earth, will at all times extend itself to the circumference of the horizon: which nerves the arm of the patriot to save his country: which lights the lamp of the philosopher to amend man: which, if it does not inspire, will yet invigorate, the martyr to merit immortality; which, when one world's agony is passed, and the glory of another is dawning, will prompt the prophet, even in his chariot of fire, and in his vision of Heaven, to bequeath to mankind the mantle of his memory! O divine, O delightful legacy, our spotless reputation! Rich is the inheritance it leaves, pious the example it testifies, pure, precious, and imperishable, the hope that it inspires.

Can you conceive a more atrocious injury than to filch from its possessor this inestimable benefit; to rob society of its charm, and solitude of its solace; not only to outlaw life, but to attaint death, converting the very grave, the refuge of the sufferer, into the gates of infamy and of shame! I can conceive very few crimes beyond it. He who plunders my property, takes from me that which can be repaired by time. But what period can repair a ruined reputation? He who maims my person, affects that which medicines may remedy. But what herb has sovereignty over the wounds of slander? He who ridicules my poverty, or reproaches my profession, upbraids me with that which industry may retrieve, and integrity purify; but what riches shall redeem the bankrupt fame! what power shall blanch the sullied snow of character! Can there be an injury more deadly! Can there be a crime more cruel? It is without remedy; it is without antidote; it is without evasion. The reptile calumny is ever on the watch: from the fascination of its eye no activity can escape; from the venom of its fang no sanity can recover: it has no engoyment but crime; it has no prey but virtue. It has no interval from the restlessness of its malice, save, when bloated with its victims, it grovels to disgorge them at the withered shrine where envy idolizes her own infirmities. Under such a visitation, how dreadful would be the destiny of the virtuous and the good, if the providence of our constitution had not given you power, as I trust you will have the principle, to bruize the head of the serpent, and crush and crumble the altar of its idolatry!"

NORFOLK, Sept. 27.

Fraud in Bank Notes.—Yesterday two soldiers from Fort Norfolk went to the store of Mr. M'Dowell in this town and made some small purchase, for which they tendered him a 50 dollar note of the State Bank of North Carolina. Mr. M. having some doubts whether the note was genuine, sent it to the Virginia Bank, where it was received and passed to his credit, upon which he gave the soldiers their change. Shortly after the note was returned to Mr. M. from the bank with a message that it was counterfeit: and upon a close inspection it appeared that it was originally a three dollar note, but had been metamorphosed into a fifty by the help of a fifty cent Treasury Bill of the state of North Carolina, the figures of which had been cut out and ingeniously pasted over those of the 3 dollar note; and thus, the word "three" in letters being torn out, as if by accident, it bore every appearance of a genuine note. A posse was immediately dispatched after the soldier, who upon examination stated that they were merely acting as agents for another man, a friend of theirs from North Carolina, who had been about the fort for some time, and whose name was John Clarington; this man, however had taken care to evacuate the fort without the usual formalties of a capitulation. Upon searching the quarters of the delinquents, the apparatus for changing the number 3 into 50, a small press, and a number of implements, the use of which none of the bye-standers knew, besides a number of counterfeit dollars in an incipent state, were found. A note of the same description as the one above mentioned, was passed off on another store keeper on Wednesday, and as others may be in the hands of other agents and no doubt in the possession of the principal himself, who has made a safe retreat, it will be well not only for the citizens of Norfolk, but for other places also, to be on their guard.

KINGSTON, Jam. Aug. 24.

Extract of a letter from St. Thomas's, dated the 8th instant.

"Gen Bolivar, accompanied by three officers, arrived here yesterday in distress. Report states, that he had started, and left his army behind, when attacked at Ocumara, by General Morales and went to Bonair: but on hearing that Sir Gregor M'Gregor, who had captured Vittoria, had come up with 700 men, defeated Morales, & again got possession of Ocumara, he returned, but would not be received by his troops. Morales desperately wounded, and obliged to retreat to Porto Cabello.

"Subletree has had an action with some of the royal troops, and was compelled to retreat towards Cumana, where by; Good Hope, Tourasin; & Caroline, George, all from this port: none discharged. Sloop Frolic, Kennedy, from ditto, was taken in molasses for this port or Savannah. The revolutionary privateers annoyed the Spanish commerce considerably, several of them were cruising near the port of Havana, & had captured an inward bound Guineaman. In the Weazle came passengers 4 seamen, part of the crew of the ship Three Sisters, captain John Hemmington, lost on Cape Florida. She sailed from N. York on the 5th August, bound to N. Orleans, and got ashore on the night of the 29th: she was in light ballast trim, every thing except a few clothes were lost—the whole crew consisted of 19, they were all taken off by two Providence wreckers: one of them spoke the Weazle, and put the above men on board, the remainder are gone to Nassau. On the 15th inst. capt Chazal saw on Carisford Reef, an hermaphrodite brig, with yellow sides. The Weazle experienced a severe gale on Saturday and Sunday last. On Sunday night was obliged to scud for 6 hours.

CENSUS.

Nile's Weekly Register presents us with views of the past and probable population of the United States.

According to the Census of

1790, we had	3929,326
1800,	5,308,666
1810,	7,839,903

Mr. N. calculates, that in 1820 we shall probably have a population of 9,965, 178 souls. The western states will of course, increase much faster than those on the sea board; Kentucky (for instance) is calculated to increase 60 per cent in ten years; Tennessee, 75 per cent; Ohio, 150; Louisiana, 125; Indiana, 700; Mississippi Territory, 126 Illinois Territory, 650; Michigan Territory, 500; while of all the atlantic states the greatest increase is allowed to Pennsylvania, being but 531-3 per cent, Virginia is estimated at but 15.

According to these datas, the states will stand in the following order, as to their gross population: New York, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, North Carolina, Ohio Massachusetts, South Carolina, Tennessee, Maryland, Georgia, Maine, New Jersey, Connecticut, Vermont, New Hampshire, Louisiana, Indiana, Missouri, Mississippi, Rhode Island, Delaware, Illinois.

In gross numbers, Virginia now stands first, (being 974. 622)—New York next (being 959, 049)—Pennsylvania third (being 810, 091,) Massachusetts, inclusive of Maine, the fourth, viz (709, 745,) &c. &c.

Mr. Niles has not calculated the rates of actual increase on the three last census—but the rates of the whole increase may be thus stated:

Increase from 1790 to 1800—35 per cent.
" 1800 to 1810—36 "

Taking 36 per cent, therefore, as the average of our increase for every ten years, these conclusions follow:

1st. That the United States double their population in twenty eight years:

2nd. That, applying the same ratio of increase to the next census, we may be expected to number in 1820, about 9 846 268—only 117, 910 souls less than Mr. Niles's estimates.

Let us say then, in round numbers, that in 1820, our population will amount to ten millions of souls—Where is the limit to the astonishing extension?

Let us suppose, what will probably be more correct, that our numbers will not advance every ten years as much as 36 per cent—but that they may increase about 3 per cent less in that period, in other words, that from 1800 to 1830, the increase is only thirty three per cent, to 1840, 30 per cent—and 1850, 27 per cent. Making this allowance, (that we may sin on the safe side,) still it follows that

In	1830 we shall have	13 300,000
	1840	17 290,000
	1850	21, 958 300

By these estimates, the United States will have in thirty three years a population of nearly twenty two millions considerably more than the population of Great Britain and Ireland, and in about ten years, more than the population of France.

What an astonishing scene thus bursts upon the sight! If the people of the United States continue to understand their own interests, if they silence the voice of local prejudices and personal passions; if they preserve this free government, bequethed to us by the virtues of our fathers; and guard the Union, as the best security against the machinations of foreign enemies, or the turbulence of intestine contests; if they march on for the next thirty three years in the same track which they have pursued for the last thirty years, who will dare to caculate the prosperity of this western region? We may say without vanity, that we shall be the greatest people which the sun ever shone on—Happier even than the Archises predicted the Roman people would be: for, the arts and sciences will advance at least as rapidly as our power. We dare to hope, that in statuary, in oratory, and in Astronomy, we shall not fall so far behind our contemporaries; that we shall not despise them as the ancient Romans did; but that we may boast of these arts also, that we shall use our political power more mildly than the decendents of Archises, and that their boast,

Parcere subjectis, et debellare superbos
To spare the conqur'd, and pull down the proud may only men, as to us, that we assert our rights against all who infringe them, and never impose any unreasonable terms upon the conquered enemies.

Visions of glory! spare the aching sight;
Ye unborn ages, press not on our soul!

JAMES KENNEDY & SON,

BOOKSELLERS, KING STREET,

Have just received from LEE'S PATENT MEDICINE Store, No. 46 Maiden Lane, N. York,

A FRESH SUPPLY

Of the following genuine Medicines.

For the prevention and cure of Bilious and Malignant Fevers, is recommended

Hahn's Anti-Bilious Pills.

THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly grateful to the inventor's feelings, in several parts of the West Indies, and the Southern & Middle States, particularly in N. York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Petersburg, Richmond, Norfolk, Edenton, Wilmington, Charleston, and Savannah. The testimony of a number of persons at each of the above places can be adduced, who have reason to believe, that a timely use of this salutary remedy has, under Providence, preserved their lives, when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy, founded on mere assertion.

It is not, indeed, presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience, for believing that a dose of these Pills, taken once in every two weeks, during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventative; and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases, their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate, and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation, and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to carry off superfluous bile & prevent its morbid secretions—to restore & amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which is so often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold it taken on its first appearance—they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficacious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.

HAMILTON'S WORM DESTROYING LOZENGES.

Which have cured an immense number of persons of both sexes, of every age, and in every situation, of various dangerous complaints arising from worms, and from obstructions or foulness in the stomach and bowels.

This medicine bears no analogy whatever to others of similar titles so commonly complained of, as operating with violence; on the contrary, a particular excellence of this remedy is its being suited to every age and constitution. It contains nothing but what is perfectly innocent, and is also mild in its operation, cannot injure the most delicate pregnant lady or the tenderest infant of a week old, should no worms exist in the body; but will, without pain or griping, cleanse the stomach and bowels, of whatever is foul or offensive, and thereby prevent the production of worms, and many fatal disorders. The lozenges are particularly efficacious in carrying off all gross humours and eruptions, feverish and bilious complaints, and are the safest and mildest purgative that can be used on any occasion.

DESCRIPTION OF WORMS.

And the symptoms by which they are known:

Worms which infest the human body, are chiefly of four kinds, viz.—The Teres, or large round worm; the Ascarides, or small maw-worm; the Cucurbitina, or short, flat, white worm; and lastly, the Tænia, or tape-worm, so called from its resemblance to tape. This is often many yards long, and is full of joints. It is most hurtful and most difficult to remove.

Among the symptoms attending worms are—disagreeable breath, especially in the morning; bad and corrupted gums; itching in the nose, and about the seat; convulsions, epileptic fits, and sometimes privation of speech; starting and grinding of the teeth in sleep; irregular appetite, sometimes loathing food, and sometimes voracious; purging, with slimy & fœtid stools; vomiting; large and hard belly; pains and sickness at the stomach; slow fever, with small and irregular pulse; a dry cough; excessive thirst; sometimes pale and unhealthy countenance, and sometimes the face bloated and flushed.
